Seaside: Then and now

A before and after look at Seaside as it was in the past and as it appears today

Seaside has a very rich and historic past — from members of the Lewis and Clark Expedition setting up a salt works in the southern area of the city to a tragic early 1900's fire that destroyed a large part of the downtown area.

Many parts of the city have changed over the years. Local landmarks such as the Cove Pier, the old Seasider Hotel and the ferris wheel ride on Broadway have all disappeared, being replaced by new buildings or attractions along the way.

For people who have grown up in the area or who have lived in Seaside for many years, the changes were accepted as a sign of the times and the old making way for the new in the name of progress.

For many others, the changes have forever altered the face of the city.

Many of the old buildings still remain today, occupied by new businesses or tenants.

Many of the old structures or attractions have disappeared from the landscape, however, leaving a feeling of nostalgia in the hearts of many people.

A fishing pier was a popular attraction in the southern part of Seaside in the early 1900's. The pier, located in the area just north of the Cove, is pictured above in 1914. A small admission fee was charged to people and they could then go out on the pier and try their luck with some ocean fishing. Mother Nature eventually reclaimed the area as winter storms and high waves doomed the fishing pier to become eventual rubble.

The photograph on the left is the same area of the Cove today. All rememberences of the old pier are now gone, part of Seaside's rich historic past.

Nelson's Tent City (above) was one of Seaside's many guest facilities in the early days of the city. The tent community was located on S. Columbia between Broadway and Avenue A on a site now occupied by the post office and Subway (below).

The original Prom was a wooden walkway, replaced in the 1920's by the concrete walk we use today.

The photo shows the area before the Turnaround was constrcuted. Note the pier on the left extending out into the ocean from an area what is now just north of the Shilo Oceanfront Resort.

On the right is the Natatorium bathhouse. The area today has been cleared for construction of the TrendWest Resorts, Inc., timeshare project to begin after Labor Day. The area on the right is now used as a public parking area (Prom and Avenue A.)

Museum building to get new look

The Seaside Museum and Historical Society was the beneficiary of a grant last year which will help change the look of the museum building.

The Northwest Oregon Economic Alliance presented a Regional Investment lottery grant to the museum of $3,125. The grant will be used to recreate a photograph of Seaside's famous "Daddy Train" from the early 1900s on the east side of the museum building at 570 Necanicum Drive. The project will cost $6,250.

Local artist David Poole is currently in the painting phase of the project in space located at the Town Center Mall.

"It will be done in five panels, so we can move it," Poole said. He added that the mural will utilize signboard material which will last longer than normal materials.

He expects the mural to be completed and ready for installation early this year.

Historical Society and Butterfield Cottage have rich history in Seaside

The Seaside Museum and Historical Society has been in operation for more than 16 years at the same location.

The society was formed in 1973 but at that time only had a few cases of materials in storage at the chamber of commerce offices.

The private, nonprofit organization now has almost 300 members. Janis Hurd currently serves as president of the 10-person board of directors operating the society.

Vice president is Joe Schafer; Paul See is secretary; Helen Gaston is treasurer; immediate past president is Harold Keith; and board members are Jim Casterline, Mary Cornell, Marjorie Diebolt, Molly Huffman and Roy Kirkham.

A group of Seaside citizens established the museum in the 1970s to collect, preserve and display materials depicting the history of the city and its people. The group's first priority was to find a location for the proposed museum.

City-owned land consisting of about one-quarter of an acre of property along Riverside Drive, known today as Necanicum Drive, became the site for the museum building.

More than $12,000 in donations were raised to begin construction of a building to house the museum. The building shell was constructed using volunteer labor and materials. Additional funding was received from the Seaside Women's Club and an anonymous gift, allowing the building to be finished. Staffed by volunteers, the museum opened in October of 1983.

While ownership of the property remains with the city, the private historical society has a 99-year lease for $1 a year.

Butterfield Cottage was offered to the society by Bert Simpson in 1985. The cottage was the last remaining structure located in the original Grimes Grove district in downtown Seaside. The cottage was previously located at 21 N. Columbia, where Heritage Square, a two-story shopping mall, stands today.

The cottage was a small, three-bedroom summer home built by Portland jeweler Horace Butterfield in 1893. It represents what typical summer beach homes looked like in Seaside at the turn of the century.

The cottage was later operated as a small rooming house until the 1950s before being moved to the current museum site at 570 Necanicum Drive.

Only minor improvements were made to Butterfield Cottage during the next five years until the society received a grant in 1990 from the Oregon State Lottery. Combined with donations from Seaside residents, enough funds were generated to complete renovations on the cottage. It was opened to the public in March 1991.

Winter hours for the museum are from noon to 3 p.m. For additional information, call 738-7065.

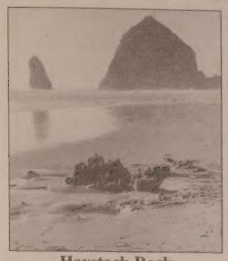
Things to see and do on the North Coast

Seaside's Quatat Marine Park — Completed in 1987, this park provides walks, seating areas, restrooms, a large deck and a floating boat dock along the Necanicum River between First Avenue and Avenue A in Seaside.

Broadway Park — Located at the east end of Broadway in Seaside, this beautiful city park is the site of the annual Seaside Community Picnic every September. The park offers two covered picnic areas, restrooms, playground equipment and several picnic sites. Situated on the banks of Neawanna Creek, the park is a great spot for feeding ducks and seagulls.



Haystack Rock

Haystack Rock — The third largest monolith in the world rises 235 feet out of the sea south of Cannon Beach at Tolovana Park. The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife has declared the area restricted to protect sea life in the delicate natural habitat. No rock climbing is allowed, but each summer the Haystack Rock Awareness Program educates visitors into the natural wonders of life on the rock and in the tide pools at its base. One of the North Coast's most recognized, and photographed, landmarks.

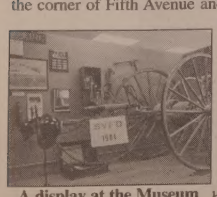
Seaside's Broadway Bridge — Constructed in 1924 by the J.H. Tillman Co. and restored during the Broadway Improvement Project of 1982-83, the Broadway Bridge is a great place to feed the ducks and seagulls and to view the Necanicum River as it meanders through town.

Seaside Promenade — Officially designated by the Oregon Legislature as the end of the Lewis and Clark Trail,the Prom runs adjacent to the ocean for more than three miles. Visitors may enjoy a stroll, skate or bicycle ride along the 8,000-foot Promenade. Built in 1920, the Prom underwent a facelift in 1985 and the steps leading to the beach were redone in 1999. Public restrooms are located on the Prom at the Turnaround and at 12th Avenue.

Promenade

Seaside Aquarium — The aquarium, two blocks north of the Turnaround in Seaside, has been in business since 1937. They open at 9 a.m. daily and feature 35 tanks of marine life indigenous to the Pacific Coast, a pool filled with Harbor Seals barking to be fed by visitors and an interpretive center which provides a learning experience for the whole family. With hands-on displays, the aquarium is a favorite destination of children of all ages.

Seaside Museum — The Seaside Museum, located at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Necanicum Drive, takes an historic look at Oregon's oldest resort community. Featuring photographs and memorabilia from the city's colorful past, exhibits also include historic logging artifacts and remnants of a Smithsonian archeological dig which uncovered many items from Seaside's Indian heritage. Call 738-7065 for more information on hours and days of operation.



A display at the Museum

Seltzer Park at the Cove — With it's stunning views of Tillamook Head, the Pacific Ocean and the shoreline in Seaside and Gearhart, this little park is a popular place for wave (and surfer) watching, feeding the seagulls and enjoying sunsets or sunrises. Public restrooms are also located at the park.

Spruce Run County Park — Located about 30 miles east of Seaside and Cannon Beach off highway 26, this Clatsop County-run park offers primitive campsites in a beautiful forest setting with great fishing and swimming along the banks of the Nehalem River.

Hug Point State Park — This park, located just north of Arch Cape on Highway 101, offers visitors a number of visual opportunities. From tidal caves to a waterfall to an old, rough-hewn roadbed over the cliff face, this small park is a thrill, particularly at low tide. Although camping is not permitted, it is still a popular picnic site.

Waterfalls at Hug Point

Lewis and Clark Salt Works — Boiling seawater to make salt, the Lewis and Clark Expedition operated a salt cairn in January and February, 1806, on the site of present reconstructed salt works, The site is located on Lewis and Clark Way in south Seaside, one block from the Prom. The Salt Works (together with Fort Clatsop National Memorial in Warrenton) is the only place besides Fort McHenry in Baltimore, Md., where it is legal to fly the 15-starred and striped U.S. flag that was the official flag from 1794-1818.

Cullaby Lake and Carnahan County Parks — These parks are located at each end of Cullaby Lake south of Warrenton and just east of Highway 101. Both offer boat ramps, picnic sites and swimming areas. Cullaby Lake Park has two covered group picnic sites. The lake is known for trout, bass and bluegill fishing and is the site of hydroplane races during the Astoria Regatta celebration each summer.

Klootchy Creek (Largest Sitka Spruce Tree) Park — This small park if located along Highway 26 approximately one mile east of the Cannon Beach Junction. In the park is the largest Sitka Spruce tree in the United States. The upper Necanicum River flows through the park and offers good trout, steelhead, salmon and sea run cutthroat fishing.

Fort Clatsop National Memorial — Fort Clatsop, a replica of the original winter encampment of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, is located just south of Astoria off of Highway 101. Open year-round, the memorial has an interpretive center which traces the 1805-06 journeys of the explorers. During spring and summer months, living history demonstrations are scheduled showing how the expedition actually conducted the daily routines of life.

Clatsop Plains Pioneer Church — The Gray memorial Chapel was erected on the site of the first Presbyterian Church west of the Rocky Mountains. The church is adjacent to Highway 101 approximately seven miles north of Seaside. A nearby pioneer cemetery contains graves dating back to 1840.

Arcadia Beach State Park — Arcadia Beach has several picnic sites located right off Highway 101 south of Cannon Beach. The beach has many rock formations and is great for tide pool gazing. Camping in the small park is not permitted.

Oswald West State Park — This beautiful park is named after the Oregon governor who made sure Oregon's beaches remained the property of the people. It has many short trails through scenic rain forests to the beach at Smuggler's Cove and out to rugged Cape Falcon. The park has 36 primitive campsites and even offers campers a wheelbarrow to use to get their camping gear over the quarter-mile trail to Smuggler's Cove. Oswald West is also the access point for the popular surfing spot known as "Short Sands."

Nehalem Bay State Park — This park features 292 all-electric hook-up campsites, 30 picnic sites and boat ramp facilities. It is located three miles south of Manzanita Junction on Highway 101. Nehalem Bay State Park offers fisherman a chance to fish along the Nehalem River close to where it meets the Pacific Ocean.

Weinhard-Astoria Arch — The three-ton arch from the Weinhard-Astoria Hotel is a reminder of the disastrous 1922 fire which destroyed downtown Astoria. The arch is located in the Astoria City Park.

Columbia River Maritime Museum — Celebrating the rich Maritime history of the Columbia River region, this 25,000-square-foot museum includes exhibits featuring items as large as entire ships and as small as magnificent pieces of scrimshaw. It has been described as the most beautiful museum in western America. It is located at the foot of 17th Street on the Astoria waterfront. Moored alongside the museum is the Lightship Columbia, which once served as a beacon for ships approaching the mouth of the Columbia River.

Ecola State Park — Located to the north of Cannon Beach, Ecola State Park offers some of the most spectacular views of the Oregon Coast. There are several picnic sites in the park but camping is not permitted except along Tillamook Head Trail where a few hiker-biker campsites are available. There is a beautiful hiking trail which winds its way through the park and connects with the trail over Tillamook Head. It's a great place for whale watching during the annual migrations and a place where you can usually catch a glimpse of sea lions basking on surf-drenched rocks.

The Astoria Column — Erected in 1926, the Astoria Column depicts, in a spiralling mural painted on its outside walls, the westward sweep of discovery and settlement of the Pacific Northwest. Visitors who climb the 166 steps will enjoy a magnificent panoramic view of the Pacific Ocean, the Columbia River and the Young's River bay estuary and the surrounding coast mountain range.

Astoria Column

Fort Stevens State Park — The first military installation constructed on the site was built by the Union Army during the Civil War. The park is the site of a civil war reenactors gathering every summer. The park includes Battery Russell, a gun emplacement from World War II, Coffenbury Lake for trout fishing and the wreck of the Peter Iredale, the skeleton of a ship that ran aground in the early 1900s. The South Jetty, where the mighty Columbia River meets the Pacific, is also located nearby.

Whale Watching — One of the most popular activities in late December and early March is watching for the whales as they migrate. The gentle leviathans head to warmer southern waters to breed in late December and early January, then return with their calves in tow to Alaskan waters in the spring, usually in mid-March. Whale watching spots can be found along the full length of Highway 101 where volunteers can be found, ready to count sightings and to inform visitors with information about the whales .
